MoviePass Just Got Even Cheaper, Thanks to Costco

By TALIA AVAKIAN December 13, 2017

Movie buffs are in for a treat in 2018, thanks to a new deal that offers year-long subscriptions to both MoviePass and Fandor for half price.

Costco is currently offering an evoucher that bundles a full year of access to MoviePass and Fandor for just $89.99.

MoviePass, which gives free movie tickets, usually costs $120 a year alone. Twelve months of Fandor, a movie streaming service, is $60.

MoviePass offers access to one free full-price movie ticket every day at some 4,000 movie theaters across the country. The MoviePass subscription doesn't work for 3-D theaters, but there are no blackout dates, meaning fans can catch a movie anytime they like.

Fandor offers subscribers 5,000 movies to stream in the comfort of their own homes. Titles range from Hollywood classics to documentaries, foreign films and the latest film festival favorites.

Customers don't need a Costco subscription to sign up for the deal.
